

Foreign visitors should pay more than local visitors for cultural and historical attractions. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this opinion?

It is sometimes argued that tourists from overseas should be charged more than local residents to visit important sites and monuments. I completely disagree with this idea.

The argument in favour of higher prices for foreign tourists would be that cultural or historical attractions often depend on state subsidies to keep them going, which means that the resident population already pays money to these sites through the tax system. However, I believe this to be a very shortsighted view. Foreign tourists contribute to the economy of the host country with the money they spend on a wide range of goods and services, including food, souvenirs, accommodation and travel. The governments and inhabitants of every country should be happy to subsidise important tourist sites and encourage people from the rest of the world to visit them.

If travellers realised that they would have to pay more to visit historical and cultural attractions in a particular nation, they would perhaps decide not to go to that country on holiday. To take the UK as an example, the tourism industry and many related jobs rely on visitors coming to the country to see places like Windsor Castle or Saint Paul's Cathedral. These two sites charge the same price regardless of nationality, and this helps to promote the nation's cultural heritage. If overseas tourists stopped coming due to higher prices, there would be a risk of insufficient funding for the maintenance of these important buildings.

In conclusion, I believe that every effort should be made to attract tourists from overseas, and it would be counterproductive to make them pay more than local residents.

A lot of places in the world rely on tourism as a main source of income. Unfortunately, tourism can also be a source of problems if it is not managed correctly. Describe the advantages and disadvantages of tourism in the modern world. Do you think that benefits of tourism outweigh its drawbacks?

Nowadays tourism generates a significant portion of national income for many countries, but it has certain drawbacks too. This essay will examine the advantages and disadvantages of tourism and provide a logical conclusion.

The two main advantages of developed tourism industry are boost in country's economy and a large number of new job openings for the local people. Firstly, tourists spend money on a wide range of services, including hotels, amusements, transportation, food and medical services. This way, tourism yields an additional income, greatly supporting the country's economy. Secondly, tourism increases the level of employment by bringing new jobs. For instance, the influx of tourists results in a larger demand in restaurant workers, tour guides, hotel staff and employees of retail services, exhorting business owners to hire more people for these positions.

But tourism also has some major disadvantages like destruction of popular tourist destinations and development of illegal economic activities. Ancient buildings, temples and monuments struggle to cope with a vast amount of visitor's traffic and get damaged. Also, the large number of tourists can cause environmental problems. For instance, when places of interest are overcrowded, natural resources often become overexploited. What's more, the presence of a considerable number of tourists with a lot of money to spend, and often carrying valuables such as cameras and jewelry, increases the attraction for criminals and brings with it activities like robbery and drug dealing. However, proper hospitality management and correct usage of tourism revenue by the local government can eliminate these disadvantages.

To conclude, although tourism can have certain negative effects like destructive impact and growth of crime rate, it has an extremely positive influence on country's economy and provides a large number of new jobs for the local people. I believe that these benefits of tourism outweigh its drawbacks.

Tourism is encouraged in many countries. Does tourism bring more advantages or disadvantages to a country?

Most of the nations across the globe promote tourism. In my opinion, the advantages tourism can have on a nation's economy and development are greater than any disadvantages.

The primary benefit of encouraging tourism is that it is a profitable source of income for many countries. In other words, tourists provide a plethora of opportunities for the natives and the nation to earn money. Because of this rising demand for tourism, many youngsters are employed in different sectors which circuitously assist to reduce the unemployment rate in many countries. Thus, a nation with lower unemployment and higher sources of income will lift their laurel beyond imagination

Similarly, to attract more foreigners to the country, the government and the public will make efforts to improve the infrastructure of cities and towns. Furthermore, they become more concerned about retaining the natural resources and conserving the countryside as most visitors enjoy visiting and appreciating the beauty of the countryside. Therefore, it is obvious that encouraging tourism apparently paves the way to protect the environment and its resources from many threats.

Despite the above-mentioned advantages, I admit that there are some disadvantages to promoting tourism. One such issue is the chances of spreading of any communicable disease. Fortunately, health sectors are now developed in such a way that medical tests and health checkups are done appropriately to ensure the safety of the locals and the tourists from any contagious diseases. Hence, such concerns do not hold much water.

In conclusion, undoubtedly, tourism plays an integral part in escalating a nation's revenue and it indirectly helps in the development and protection of the rural and urban areas. Therefore, I think that the demerits are negligible compared to the merits.

International air fares are falling and tourism is growing. What are the advantages and disadvantages of increasing tourism activity?

International air fares are falling. More and more employers are offering holiday entitlements. Needless to say, the number of people who travel to exotic holiday destinations across the world is on the rise. While this trend has both upsides and downsides, in my opinion, the advantages outweigh the disadvantages.

The tourism industry has witnessed tremendous growth over the last few years. And it looks like it will continue this upward trend. The growth in the tourism sector has many advantages. In many parts of the world tourism has created more jobs than any other industry. Tourism helps countries to earn valuable foreign exchange. Tourism has also helped in the preservation of many heritage structures and art forms which would, otherwise, have died without leaving a trace. For example, many ethnic Indian dance forms would have died if they hadn't received the patronage of foreign tourists. Tourism also promotes cultural understanding. As people travel to other countries, they get an opportunity to learn about other cultures and beliefs. Intercultural understanding is always good for global harmony.

On the flip side, tourism has some disadvantages too. In many countries, particularly those in the under developed world, tourism has led to the establishment of some morally questionable practices. For example, many tourist hotspots in Asia and Latin America are now synonymous with prostitution and illegal gambling. Tourist hotspots are also plagued by problems like theft, maimed begging and drug abuse. However, these disadvantages are nothing compared to the advantages and it doesn't take a lot of efforts to see that tourism has more benefits than drawbacks.

To conclude, the growth in the tourism sector does have some downsides; however, the negatives pale in comparison to the positives because tourism creates jobs and promotes understanding between people.

A lot of places in the world rely on tourism as a main source of income. Unfortunately, tourism can also be a source of problems if it is not managed correctly. Describe the advantages and disadvantages of tourism in the modern world. Do you think that benefits of tourism outweigh its drawbacks?

In the era of globalization, tourism has started playing a vital role in the development of economies. Nowadays, tourism makes significant contributions to the economy of a nation; however it has some drawbacks too. This essay will discuss the pros and cons of tourism before arriving at a conclusion.

The two major advantages of tourism are the augmentation of the national economy and the generation of employment for local people. Firstly, tourists use a wide range of services which includes hotel bookings, tourist guides, food and transportation. This results in additional income which in turn contributes to the nation's economy. For example, tourism increases consumptions of domestic product which have significant impact in the overall GDP growth of the country. Secondly, tourism creates a significant number of job opportunities as without people tour operators, restaurants, hotels and transport services cannot operate. Hence, tourism brings significant benefits such as boost in national economy and employment for local people.

However, there are various disadvantages associated with tourism such as destruction of popular destinations and rise in criminal and illegal activities. Firstly, the massive influx of tourists to places like historical monuments and pilgrimage centres causes significant damage to these age old structures. In addition, to cope up with the demand of tourists / tourism national resources are overexploited. Secondly, as tourists carry valuable items with them such as cash, jewelry and other expensive items, they may become the targets of thieves and other anti-social elements. Hence tourism also has many disadvantages which can be eliminated by the government if they ensure proper security measures and timely maintenance of popular tourist spots.

To conclude, in spite of the fact that tourism has certain disadvantages such as destructive effects on monuments and increase in criminal activities it has very constructive effect on a nation's economy and gives a plethora of new job opportunities for locals. I personally believe that the advantages of tourism outweigh its disadvantages.

A lot of places in the world rely on tourism as a main source of income. Unfortunately, tourism can also be a source of problems if it is not managed correctly. Describe the advantages and disadvantages of tourism in the modern world. Do you think that benefits of tourism outweigh its drawbacks?

Thanks to the advancement in the transportation facilities, the scope of tourism has increased immensely. Some countries rely on tourism as a major generator of wealth while there are certain drawbacks such as destruction of local environment; however, in my opinion the advantages outnumber the disadvantages.

Some places have unique characteristics like being historical monuments or exotic scenery which attracts people from different parts of the world. The tourists visiting these places spend money there by buying products and services. Locals can also earn money by working as tourist guides. The tourism industry also indirectly boosts the related sectors like travel industry and helps in improvement of infrastructure. As many times there will be certain entry fee to visit any historical structure. The income generated by this means will be helpful in preserving those monuments for future generations. On the other hand people living in places where tourism industry is not developed will not be able to benefit from such opportunities.

On the other hand, if the tourist location is not managed properly, it can cause deleterious effect on the ecology of that place. The demand for increased accommodation can lead to the construction of more hotels and often this causes the destruction of forests. This disturbs the balance in the environment and might lead to the extinction of rare flora and fauna. Some famous places which attract tourists are situated in places where the local people have unique language and culture. The locals often have to deal with foreign visitors leading to acculturation which can result in the erosion of indigenous cultures.

To conclude, tourism is a vital sector that generates employment opportunities and boosts national economy. However, it is important to address important issues like ecological destruction with proper planning. On balance, I believe the advantages of promoting tourism outweigh the downsides.

Today more and more tourists are visiting places where the conditions are difficult, such as the Sahara desert or The Antarctic. What are the benefits and disadvantages for tourists who visit such places?

Nowadays, the trend of visiting a place where the conditions are harsh has peaked. People often prefer going to places like the Sahara desert or the Antarctic. This essay discusses various advantages and downsides of travelling to these places.

There are two main benefits to spending a holiday at a place where conditions are tough. Firstly, it is often claimed that many people enjoy adventurous trips, and such places are the perfect choice for them. Visiting these places gives travellers the experience of a lifetime, which makes the pain taken to travel to these places worthwhile. Secondly, places with harsh conditions are generally cut off from the rest of the world. As a result of this, we hardly know anything about their culture and lifestyle. Travelling to these places enables people to mingle with natives and learn about their culture.

On the other hand, there are apparent drawbacks to visiting a location with extreme conditions. To begin with, these places can pose a risk to the health of a traveller. It is quite possible for people who visit such destinations to fall ill due to the unbearably hot or cold weather, which, in turn, can spoil their entire vacation. Furthermore, it is often argued that these trips are usually not pocket-friendly as a lot of extra arrangements need to be made for these excursions. For instance, if someone plans to explore an extremely cold place, he will have to spend a huge amount of money for buying appropriate winter clothing.

In conclusion, although travelling to difficult places is an opportunity to gain invaluable experience, such trips are not economical and they may even impact one's health adversely.

Today more and more tourists are visiting places where the conditions are difficult, such as the Sahara desert or The Antarctic. What are the benefits and disadvantages for tourists who visit such places?

Tourists these days are showing an interest in visiting places with harsh conditions. For some people traveling to such places will be a unique experience because it is not something you get to experience in your day-to-day life. However, there are some downsides to this kind of trips because they might compromise people's health and fitness. This essay will discuss both the advantages and disadvantages of visiting dangerous or off-beat locations.

Visiting a place that could pose a threat to your life may be exciting for some travelers and this feeling could actually enhance your appreciation for life and health. People are amazed by the sort of scenery and landscape that they might find in isolated places untouched by humans. This allows them to find a connection with their inner self. Witnessing the wonders of the nature also allows people to find a new purpose in life and look at the world in a different light.

Also, for some people traveling to uninhabited and peaceful places could improve their health in several ways. For example, in 2016, the University Of Cambridge reported that people who lived for a month in the Brazilian Jungle improved their sight by sixty percent in comparison to those who lived their regular life in the city.

On the other hand, traveling to locations with difficult conditions might create a problem to those tourists who are mentally weak or addicted to technology. The feeling of isolation could make them feel homesick and they may get depressed and cut the trip short before visiting the best parts. To illustrate, a survey done by The Institute of Tourism in Africa showed that almost twenty-five percent of tourists crossing the Sahara desert did not finish the tour because they were feeling isolated and the conditions were too extreme for them. As a result they had to be evacuated by an emergency helicopter.

To conclude, exploring places that have an uncommon condition could be a positive trip for some people looking for a spiritual experience or a health improvement. However, for those who are afraid of losing their comfort zone and the connection with the 21st century, this kind of excursion might be a disappointing idea due to the facilities that these places lack.

International tourism is becoming a major industry. Some people think it causes more tension than the anticipated understanding between different countries. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Tourism has become a major industry over the last few decades. In fact, for some countries tourists are the biggest source of revenue. While it is generally believed that tourism, especially international tourism, promotes understanding among people of different cultures and beliefs some people argue that it creates more conflicts and tension. I do not quite agree with this. While I do admit that international tourism has some negative aspects to it, in my opinion, its disadvantages pale in comparison to its advantages.

The influx of tourists can certainly cause some problems in the host country. Tourists may damage the local environment by littering around. This can be a real problem in places that attract a large number of people. A few of them might even show disrespect to the local culture and thus create conflicts. However, such incidents are rare. Tourists generally abide by the local rules and customs even if they do not really respect them. Most of them understand the dangers involved in getting into conflicts with the local community. Therefore, the argument that tourism creates more tension does not hold much water.

On the flip side, tourism offers numerous benefits. It benefits travelers as well as their hosts. Tourists help the local economy thrive. During their visit they buy local handicrafts or produce and thus help the local artisans and farmers earn a living. In fact, nations that attract a large number of international tourists have generally higher standard of living because of the valuable foreign exchange they earn. Better still, tourism broadens the perspectives of people. People who travel are more tolerant of change and diversity. They understand that it is all right to speak a different language, have a different skin colour or belong to a different faith. Actually this understanding is what we need in this age where people fight over trivial issues like race, religion or skin colour.

To conclude, after analysing the situation, it is not hard to see that tourism does not cause tension. It might cause environmental problems in extremely popular tourist destinations but the chances of tourists creating conflicts are rather slim. After all, people travel to learn and discover. They will not fly thousands of miles if their only objective was to create conflict in another part of the world.
